New Breed on Rise

There exists a strange breed of American today, a small minority to be sure but his number is on the increase.

He is the decent citizen and taxpayer who does not enjoy having part of every hard earned dollar go to the support of greedy dictators, to make bullets that kill innocent people, bombs that destroy the livelihood of brow-beaten peasants already bowed from pillage and bloodshed.

He wants to send bread, not bullets; he wants his country to go down in history as the nation that outgrew the techniques of brutes and destroyers who won wars but created decades of hatred; he wants to be part of the America who showed her greatness by the export of economic freedom, not war.

Fellow Americans, awaken to the pitfalls of an outmoded foreign policy; reflect that the "consensus" on Viet Nam may not be that of the people, but of the state department, the defense department, the CIA, and White House staff.

Ask yourself from whose earnings come the billions of dollars that support the tyrants around the globe whose feudal methods lay the groundwork for countless evils whether they be called communism or by any other name.
